PARIS, March 1.

The king of Spain is preparing to make a journey to Catalonia, where great diſcontents ſubſiſt, as well as in Navarre, whence the cortes ſent deputies to Madrid, who returned without having obtained an audience.

Letters from Genoa, of the 28th, ſtate that the king of Sardinia had cauſed his brother the duke D'Aoſta, to be arreſted. This prince is accuſed of having taken a part in the conſpiracy, of having mediated putting himſelf at the head of the diſcontented nobles, of poſſeſſing himſelf of Turin, the citadel, and of having himſelf declared regent of the kingdom.

General Hoche, it is ſaid, is to command the ſieges of Manheim and Mayence.

March 2.

Letters from the right bank of the Rhine bring information that the troops drawn from the Auſtrian army of the Lower Rhine, in order to their being ſent to Italy, have been replaced on the Lahn by others from the Upper Rhine, and they are without any apprehenſion of an attack on the part of the enemy. The imperial army of the Lower Rhine will be compoſed of 85,000 effective men, of which a third will be cavalry. General Werneck, who commanded it, has obtained his diſmiſſion, and has been ſucceeded by general Cray, who has diſplayed the greateſt talents in the courſe of the preſent war. The enemy appear determined to act on the defenſive, and in order to this, it will concentrate its force between the Sieg and the Lahn, in the defiles of the mountains of that country.

From another quarter, it appears certain, that as ſoon as the troops can begin the campaign, generals Moreau and Hoche, each at the head of a formidable army, will advance on the right ſide by Duſſeldorff, and the bridge of Neuwied, in order to penetrate into Franconia; We learn, that the neceſſary preparations are already making at the army of the Sambre and Meuſe, in order to carry this important operation into effect.

LONDON, March 14.

Admiralty Office, February 28.

Copy of a letter from Commodore Nelſon, to Admiral Sir John Jervis, commander in chief of his majeſty's ſhips and veſſels in the Mediterranean, dated December 20, 1796.

Laſt night at 10 o'clock, I ſaw two Spaniſh frigates, and directed Captain Cockburn, in the Minerva, to attack the ſhip which carried a poop light, the Blanche bore down to attack the other. I have not yet received from Captain Preſton an account of his action, yet, I preſume ſhe had not ſuffered much damage.

Captain Cockburn brought his ſhip to cloſe action at 20 minutes before 11, which continued without intermiſſion till half paſt one, when La Sabina, of 40 guns, twenty eight eighteen pounders on her main deck, two hundred and eighty-ſix men, Captain Don Jacoba Stuart, having loſt her mizen maſt, (as ſhe did after the action) main and foremaſt, 164 men killed and wounded, ſtruck her colours.

You are ſir, ſo thoroughly acquainted with the merits of Captain Cockburn, that it is needleſs for me to expreſs them; but the diſcipline of the Minerva does the higheſt credit to her captain and the lieutenants, and I wiſh fully to expreſs the ſenſe I entertain of their judgment and gallantry; Lieut. Culverhouſe, the firſt lieutenant, is an old officer of very diſtinguiſhed merit; lieutenants Hardy, Gage, and Noble, deſerve every praiſe which gallantry and zeal juſtly entitle them to, as do every other officer and man in the ſhip. You will obſerve, ſir, I am ſure with regret, amongſt the wounded, Lieut. James Noble, who quitted the Captain to ſerve with me, and whoſe merits, and repeated wounds received in fighting the enemies of our country, entitle him to every reward which a grateful nation can beſtow; the Minerva's opponent being commanded by a gallant officer, was well defended, which has cauſed her liſt of killed and wounded to be great, as alſo her maſts, ſail, and rigging, to be much damaged.

I have the honour to be, Sir, &c.

(Signed) HORATIO NELSON.

Killed, ſeven. Wounded, thirty-four. Miſſing four. ſuppoſed to be in the prize.

Officers wounded, Lieut. J. Noble, Mr. Merryweather, Boatſwain.

Petty officers killed and wounded.

Killed, one midſhipman. Wounded, Captains Clerk and Serjeant of the 11th regiment, ſerving as marines.

Damages, all her maſts ſhot through, and furniture much cut.

(Signed) HORATIO NELSON.

Copy of a letter from Commodore Nelſon to Admiral Sir John Jervis, commander in chief of his majeſty's ſhips in the Mediterranean, dated Dec. 20, 1796, ſeven P. M.

In addition to my letter of this morning, have to acquaint you that Lieutenants Culverhouſe and Hardy, with a proper number of men, being put in charge of the Sabina, and ſhe taken in tow, at 4 A. M. a frigate was ſeen coming up, which by her ſignals was known to be Spaniſh; at half paſt four ſhe came to action with the Minerva, who caſt off the prize, and Lieut. Culverhouſe was directed to ſtand to the ſouthward; after a trial of ſtrength of more than half an hour ſhe wore, hauled off, or I am confident ſhe would have ſhared the fate of her companions.

At this time three other ſhips were ſeen ſtanding for the Minerva; hope was alive, that they were only frigates, and alſo that the Blanche was one of them; but when the day dawned, it was mortifying to ſee they were two Spaniſh ſhips of the line and two frigates, and the Blanche far to windward. In this ſituation, the enemy frequently within ſhot, by bringing up the breeze, it required all the ſkill of Captain Cockburn, which he eminently diſplayed, to get off with a cripple ſhip: and here I muſt alſo do juſtice to Lieutenants Culverhouſe and Hardy, and expreſs my tribute of praiſe in their management of the prize; a frigate repeatedly fired into her without effect, and at laſt the Spaniſh admiral quitted the purſuit of the Minerva for that of Sabina, who was ſteering a different courſe, evidently with the intention of attracting the notice of the admiral, as Engliſh colours were hoiſted over the Spaniſh. The Sabina's main and foremaſt fell overboard before ſhe ſurrendered. This is, ſir, an unpleaſant tale; but the merits of every officer and man in the Minerva and her prize, were eminently conſpicuous through the whole of this arduous day. The enemy quitted the purſuit of the Minerva at dark.

Killed, none. Wounded, 10.

Officer wounded, Mr. Hinton, gunner.

Mainmaſt much damaged, ſails and rigging much cut.

Signed, HORATIO NELSON.

Copy of a letter from Commodore Nelſon to Admiral Sir John Jervis, K. B. dated Dec. 24, 1796.

Yeſterday the Minerva took, off the ſouth end of Sardinia, a French privateer called the Maria, of ſix nine pounders and 68 men, three days from Marſeilles, on a cruiſe, taken nothing.

I am, ſir, your moſt obedient ſervant,

HORATIO NELSON.

Copy of a letter from Captain Macnamara, of his Majeſty's ſhip Southampton, to Sir John Jervis, K. B. dated Porto Ferrajo, Dec. 8, 1796.

SIR,

Cruiſing off Cape Dell Melle, purſuant to an order from Captain Freemantle, at ſix o'clock P. M. of the 2d inſt. I diſcovered a ſail to the weſtward. I made ſail, and after a chaſe of ſix hours and a half came up with her cloſe under Monaco, making in for the land, with an intention to run her on ſhore. To obviate their purpoſe there were no other means left but to lay her on board, as it blew a hard gale of wind to the S. E. Our firſt attempt failed in conſequence of a heavy ſea and the darkneſs of the night; however, the ſecond attempt was more ſucceſsful, as I threw men on board her, and brought her off without any damage done to either veſſel: The badneſs of the weather prevented our changing priſoners or having any communication for forty-eight hours after we took poſſeſſion of her. She proved to be the Corſo, a fine Spaniſh man of war brig, of 18 guns, ſix pounders, and one hundred and thirty-ſix men, bound from Genoa to Barcelona, and commanded by Don Antonio Occaro. She is a remarkable faſt ſailing veſſel, quite new, well fitted, and armed at all points. I have the honour to remain, &c.

J. MACNAMARA.

BALTIMORE, April 12.

Arrived this day, the brig Enterprize, captain Peaſe, in eighteen days from Cape-Francois.

Matters ſtill remained in a very unſettled and critical ſtate at the Cape.

Capain Peaſe informs, that the Britiſh capture all Americans they come acroſs, bound to the Cape; but thinks their ſituation none the worſe of that, as they are paid ready caſh for their cargoes, and can purchaſe coffee at 21 ſols. Was boarded by a Britiſh man of war, who ſaid he was one of Barney's birds, but on examining his papers, let him proceed without unneceſſary detention.

PETERSBURG, April 25.

The preſent ſtate of public credit in England is at once ſo novel and intereſting, that every ſubject allied thereto, muſt partake of its nature; its influence on trade muſt more eminently intereſt the United States, and the effect which it muſt produce on our funds, will be very conſiderable; the bankruptcies which the exigencies of government have already occaſioned are ſaid to be numerous, and the effects which the Britiſh funds muſt feel, by the payment of dividends in paper inſtead of ſpecie may be eaſily foreſeen—from the effects of leſſer national diſtreſſes we may apprehend what may ariſe from the preſent ſtate of things, and in this view it is that we give the following particulars of all the bankruptcies from an Engliſh publication (written by a Mr. Grant, a perſon uſually in the employment of adminiſtration)—which have taken place from the year 1740, (including that year) to the 31ſt of December laſt.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| In 1740 there were | 270 | In 1768 there were | 295 |
| 41 | 265 | 69 | 333 |
| 42 | 247 | 70 | 287 |
| 43 | 106 | 71 | 118 |
| 44 | 187 | 72 | 170 |
| 45 | 207 | 73 | 186 |
| 46 | 167 | 74 | 231 |
| 47 | 167 | 75 | 381 |
| 48 | 208 | 76 | 430 |
| 49 | 290 | 77 | 480 |
| 50 | 212 | 78 | 565 |
| 51 | 183 | 79 | 401 |
| 52 | 166 | 80 | 456 |
| 53 | 150 | 81 | 435 |
| 54 | 232 | 82 | 560 |
| 55 | 220 | 83 | 542 |
| 56 | 274 | 84 | 531 |
| 57 | 284 | 85 | 507 |
| 58 | 334 | 86 | 496 |
| 59 | 289 | 87 | 507 |
| 60 | 231 | 88 | 709 |
| 61 | 198 | 90 | 585 |
| 62 | 236 | 91 | 611 |
| 63 | 259 | 92 | 626 |
| 64 | 332 | 93 | 1302 |
| 65 | 254 | 94 | 824 |
| 66 | 283 | 95 | 716 |
| 67 | 352 | 96 | 756 |

It appears therefore, that the bankruptcies of the laſt year exceeded the number of any former years, except 1793, and 1794—The former was a period of uncommon diſtreſs, when the principal merchants obtained a temporary relief by the iſſuing of Exchequer Bills. If the increaſe of bankruptcies is a proof of national proſperity, as ſome contend, thoſe who are of that opinion may derive very great conſolation from the above liſts. They may ſee that the bankruptcies ſince the preſent war commenced, is nearly as great as during the whole period of the American war, the numbers being as follow:

From 1775 to 1782 inclusive—8 years—3742.
From 1793 to 1796 inclusive—4 years—3608.

Difference only 134.

An Engliſh newſpaper commenting on the above adds:—

They may alſo indulge the fond dream of national proſperity ſtill more cordially, by comparing the number of bankrupts ſince the heaven born miniſter came into power, 12 years, with any 20 years proceeding, whether years of war or peace.

Some ſtateſmen ſeem of late to make it a queſtion whether war effects trade, or is productive of bankruptcies? This however, may be anſwered by a few plainer queſtions. Does a war interupt trade?—Does a war increaſe the rates of inſurance, and conſequently the price of goods? Does a war compel ſome from economy, and ſome from abſolute neceſſity, to abſtain from purchaſing? Does a war demand an increaſe of revenue at the expenſe of ſociety? In as far as war produces all theſe effects, it is as natural that it ſhould ſwell the liſt of bankruptcies, as it is natural to expect that the ſun which roſe to day ſhall riſe to-morrow.

Among a variety of Letters and Certificates which may be ſeen at the PRINTING OFFICE, is the following :—

REV. DR. MORSE, of Charleſton (Maſſ.)

DEAR SIR, December 9, 1796.

I HAVE made a faithful trial of your patent Metallic Points in a number of caſes—ſuch as burns, pains in the head, teeth, face, ears, ſide, back and limbs, ariſing from colds, and in one or two inſtances rheumatic pains have been relieved by them; and in one inſtance the painful effects of the ſting of a waſp were entirely removed. In ſome caſes I have been unſucceſsful, particularly in a burn, where * oil had been previouſly applied; and in the tooth ach, where the teeth were † very defective. On the whole, I believe the diſcovery to be a very uſeful one, I wiſh it cordially all imaginable ſucceſs.

I am, &c. JEDIDIAH MORSE.

* In the tranſfer of the patent right, one of which accompanies each ſet of inſtruments, are ſpecified, the ſeveral diſeaſes in which this treatment is uſeful—the mode of operation, and the circumſtances which prevent the general effects. It is there obſerved—" the efficacy of the means is prevented by all oily and greaſy ſubſtances.

† It may not be reaſonably preſumed that relief could be given to teeth which were very defective.
